

Dr. Vingilis is a psychologist and Director of the Population and Community Health Unit and Professor with the Departments of Family Medicine and Epidemiology and Biostatistics in the Schulich School of Medicine and Dentistry, Western University. Previously as Senior Scientist at the Addiction Research Foundation, she directed the Drinking Driving Research Program. Her research interests are injury prevention and control, at-risk youth, mental health, knowledge transfer and program evaluation methodology. She has received 16 research grants in the last five years and has over 200 publications. In 2010, she won the prestigious Widmark Award bestowed by the International Council on Alcohol, Drugs and Traffic Safety (ICADTS) to individuals and organizations that have made outstanding, sustained, and meritorious contributions to the international field of alcohol, drugs, and traffic safety.