

2018 History of Medicine Colloquium

Call for Abstracts

Email abstracts (about 300 words) to smckell@uwo.ca by Friday, February 2, 2018

Medical students are invited to submit abstracts for research presentations at the 2018 History of Medicine Colloquium. Submissions pertaining to the history of medicine and health, broadly defined, from all eras and regions of the world are welcome. Abstracts should outline the historical issue, research approach, findings, and significance (or conclusions). Six (6) abstracts will be selected by the Program Committee who will then invite these students to deliver a 10-minute oral presentation, followed by 3-5 minutes of discussion.

The Program Committee will evaluate abstracts according to the following criteria: (1) clear description of presentation and its contents; (2) methodology and research sources cited; (3) relevance and significance of the topic; (4) originality. The Program Committee will seek balance in the range of topics and interests covered in putting together an engaging program to attract a sizeable audience.

Prizes will be awarded for the best presentations.

This colloquium showcases the work of Schulich Medicine students and is open to the Schulich Medicine community and the public. A special presentation by the Schulich I&T History of Medicine Selective class will offer their views on "Why Studying Medical History May Make Me a Better Doctor." All are welcome!

Tuesday, March 20, 2018

5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

DSB 1002 (London) and MEB 2102 (Windsor)

For more information: <http://www.schulich.uwo.ca/historymedicine>